Telluria Criticism

Telluria Criticism is often colloquially known as Pit Criticism, or Pit-crit. This is not strictly accurate, since the Pit actually refers to the state of Telluria since the Eclipse of West Tellurian culture in the later 20th century. Telluria Criticism encompasses criticism of patriarchal society as a whole and particularly of the revolutionary state of Telluria after the 17th century.

The fundamental metaphysical basis for the criticism of these three periods: patriarchal society, revolutionary "modernist" society, and post-Eclipse "post-modernist" society is set out in The Three Gunas in History.

Aristasian Telluria criticism is intended not for the reform of Telluria, but for the purpose of clarifying the Aristasian culture and outlook to those who have been educated and enculturated within modern Telluria. The purpose of examining errors is not in order to induce Tellurian society to correct them, but in order to help Aristasians understand their own culture and avoid the errors of foreign cultures.

At the launch of Operation Bridgehead this fact was strongly restated and some former critical initiatives deprecated. For a full understanding of the current status of Telluria Criticism and its place within the current Aristasian deployment in Telluria, please read:
